National Park Service San Gabriel Watershed and Mountains Special Resource Study

The purpose of a special resource study is to determine whether an area is eligible to be designated as a unit of the national park system. These studies are completed by the National Park Service when directed by Congress.

These public meetings are part of the public start-up or “scoping” stage of this study. During these meetings, we will introduce the study, explain the process, answer your questions, and listen to your ideas and concerns.

Come join us! This study is an opportunity for your community and the NPS to think creatively about how to:

- protect natural and cultural resources while providing a high quality of life.
- tell the stories of important events that have occurred in this region.
- highlight the uniqueness and vitality of this area.
- provide opportunities for public use and enjoyment or recreation.
